I think I created this page to fill up space in the navigation bar, because all you need to know about this website is written in the home page. But maybe I can tell you some interesting stuff about the website.

For example, the articles here take about a second to load because I wanted to write articles, but this server only allows me to have 300 megabytes, so I made it so that all the content you see in the page is imported from another server, basically if go into view source code, you can see there are only 3 scripts, because the 3 scripts import all the stuff of the page, and there is also a PHP code that gets the views from another external file, but PHP code is not visible through the browser, that's why you can't see it through view source code. Another interesting thing about the website is that there is a secret puzzle hidden behind some articles, and I made my school solve it, like an ARG inside of the articles, they're still solving it.
